

PAPAMA MTWISHA

With a diverse 19-year career, Papama Ramogase has worked in all aspects of the fashion and style industry from fashion design, to fashion directing for publications, wardrobe styling for the TV and film industry, to personal styling and image consulting, and heading up a luxury retail concept called Luminance as creative director. All this amounts to a keen eye for style detail as well as an understanding of individual flair and expression. With her contagious enthusiasm, energy and extensive knowledge, Papama has worked with an impressive list of private and commercial clients. Some of her publication experience includes a 10-year stint as fashion and lifestyle director at Destiny Magazine, lifestyle editor at Tribute Magazine, and fashion and beauty contributor to Oprah, True Love and Femina magazines. Papama has styled wardrobe for notable TV shows such as Dressed to Impress, Coca-Cola Popstars, and Ses'Khona, as well as sat on the judging panel for numerous fashion events including the SAFW New Talent Search 2014, 2015 and 2017, Pica Awards 2013, African Fashion Week International 2010 and 2011 and the Marie Claire Prix De La Mode 2007. Most recently she has started Butter Pudding, a stylish children's label inspired by her own children.
