

NANDI DLEPU

Nandi Dlepu describes herself as a storyteller at heart: "I am passionate about telling my stories as a mother, a woman, a black woman, a South African, an African, a creative, a friend, a sister and as a human being." For Nandi that translates into a special flair for bringing people together and creating shared spaces. A multifaceted creative force to be reckoned with, her career spans over a decade in film production and events organizing. Nandi was a founding host of the hugely popular The Wknd Social monthly brunch-cum-day party, and is co-founder of Bloom, a bi-monthly for-women-by-women conversation platform and Fixin Diaries Ladies Brunch & Ride. Alongside her social enterprise projects, Nandi is a dedicated mom and publisher of the Joho Moms parenting blog. In all her work, Nandi is passionate about bringing the power of great storytelling to brands and the world alike. "People want to be engaged, challenged and inspired and this is the foundation and intention behind all my collaborations."
